Historic Preservation developed nationwide as a way to safeguard the heritage of cities during a time where wholesale demolitions were leading to the loss of community identities. Through Preservation, historic structures and objects that reflect elements of a city’s cultural, social, economic, political and architectural history were saved thus helping to retain a community’s sense of place. As Preservation developed and spread it quickly became evident that it was also an effective tool in stabilizing neighborhoods, improving property values and creating a more vibrant and desirable community.

It is well documented that Preservation generates economic benefits through both direct and indirect means. Such benefits include: improved property values leading to more tax revenue; stimulation of private investment; creation of new jobs; increased sales tax; compatible land-use patterns; and enhanced quality of life. These combined with the aesthetics and pride established through preserving our local heritage leads to a strong and desirable community; a key component in drawing people in for both recreational/tourist purposes as well as those looking for a new place to live and work.

Examples of Preservation as a stabilizing tool abound in Grand Rapids, from the commercial warehouse district of Heartside to the residential district of Cherry Hill and more. These financial benefits to owners and community can be seen through higher property values that are documented in the Assessors records as well as the real estate market.

Some wonder if Preservation has served its purpose and whether or not it still holds value. The answer to this question is yes, Preservation does continue to be an important tool in not only maintaining property values but in attracting new... owners and keeping the areas vital. Although designation does come with extra “hoops” for owners it also ensures that certain standards are maintained across the board and that private investments will not be lost should neighboring properties decline or chose to devalue their property through inappropriate alterations. The importance of security of investment is something developers and investors have recognized for years. They have utilized the same methodology seen in Preservation for modern developments of both individual homes as well as condo communities. Many new developments have required bylaws/covenants and restrictions for their community, that is typically handled through a neighborhood association or committee. They often include restrictions on paint colors, lawn ornaments, additions, outbuildings, exterior building materials, etc. These types of restrictions are put in place by the developers to ensure a certain level of investment security for those interested in purchasing within the development. As you can see the impact and philosophy of preservation has far exceeded simply saving a historic building.

To further understand the draw and desirability our local historic districts create one can simply look to the sales records of the past year as well as the influx of new construction. Houses with in historic districts are “flying off the shelf” many sell within a week and this with prices increasing. They are being sought out by income seeking buyers as well as by owner occupied buyers. Their worth is recognized by citizens from both this community as well as others and their value is increasing as we move into 2015. This value was further exemplified this past year when 3 new home owner occupied houses were built on vacant lots in Heritage Hill. This is unheard of, who wants to build in an inner city neighborhood let alone in a code restricted historic district? The answer is, young couples, young families, singles and empty nesters. With these groups in mind we have also seen developers construct and seek to construct multi-use buildings in Heartside, Cherry Hill, Fairmount Square and Wealthy Historic Districts. Why is this? It’s because of the economic and physical value of the area and desirability of the neighborhoods all of which would not be present without Historic Preservation. The architecture, the walkability, the personability, the streetscapes, and overall sense of place, all combine to create a unique and desirable environment.
In June the group hosted HISTORIC PRESERVATION 101 at the ICCF building on Cherry. The workshop was designed to dispense introductory level information regarding historic districts and what it means to live and own property in one. Speakers for the occasion were: Rebecca Smith-Hoffman who discussed why we designate; Elizabeth Hoffman-Ransford who discussed what the future holds for historic preservation; and Rhonda Baker who covered the ins and outs of the guidelines, the permitting processes and available informational help. On a beautiful sunny Monday evening the workshop was well attended with over 35 eager participants. The presentation and subsequent discussions and questions from the attendees caused the event to exceed its 8pm end time by nearly an hour, a clear indication of the participation and interest of the audience.

In response to the turnout at the first event and community request for more we held a second workshop on December 8th; again at ICCF. This workshop was designed to address owners concerns regarding weatherization and efficiency as it pertains to windows. The speakers for the event were well respected restoration professionals, Keven Doenier & John Leegwater of Midtown Craftsman. The pair volunteered their time and gave a wonderful presentation relating to all matters of window repair and weatherization. The event included a power point talk as well as several opportunities for the audience to get hands on with physical examples and samples. Again this event was well received with attendance exceeding 25 persons.
Not to be overshadowed by the impressive amount of new projects in the various historic districts; projects that focused on renovation and restoration of historic structures also thrived.

The number of applications being pulled for repairs and restoration of historic buildings is on the rise illustrating the care being given to our existing housing stock. Some projects have required years such as 333 Fountain, 28 Lafayette NE, 609 Wealthy, while others such as 413 Eastern, 978 Cherry and 40 Logan SW (Baker Lofts) seemed to happen overnight. All have had an important impact on their neighborhood and restored these beautiful architectural gems back to their former glory.

This year the HPC approved several large new construction projects and several previously approved projects came to fruition. Of these projects three are owner occupied homes being constructed in Heritage Hill, two of which are now completed and the third is nearing the end of construction.

Although a few less cranes exist in the Heartside skyline with the completion of 240 Ionia SW this shall be a short lived scenario as future projects are gearing up in the wings for 2015-2016.
Not to be out done by the two oldest districts, Heritage & Heartside, Cherry Hill, Fairmount Square and Wealthy Street are also seeing an increase in new construction which speaks volumes to the desirability of the area. Among the projects one can expect to see work begin on the new addition to the gas station at 701 Wealthy as it becomes the new home of Johnny B’s. A new multi-story residential/commercial structure and addition will grace the skyline of the Cherry business corridor as 921 Cherry is erected on the vacant lot adjacent to “The Grove” and an addition is created to 200 Eastern.

Additionally, community involvement and conversations are underway on three other projects, both with the ability to add significant life to currently unutilized land in three historic districts.

The Purpose of the HPC

1. Stabilize and improve property values in Historic Districts.

2. Strengthen the local economy.

3. Safeguard the Heritage of the City of Grand Rapids by preserving Historic Districts and Historic Landmarks that reflect elements of the City’s cultural, social, economic, political or architectural history.

4. Foster civic beauty.

These purposes were successfully served during 2014 through 327 decisions made by staff and the Commission. These decisions preserved the integrity of the structures and district while at the same time enabling practical changes which allow for economic use of historic buildings. The significant amount of investment in improvement and renovation of many buildings in the historic districts speaks to the impact of historic preservation on economic development.

HPC News

- Staff continues to partner with neighborhood associations & GRAR to create educational workshops

- Staff has joined the State Historic Preservation Review Board

- HPC bid fair well to long time Chair Barry VanDyke as well as Commissioners, Heather Edwards & Kevin Doenier.

- HPC welcomed Jenn Gavin and welcomed back Kerry Baldwin; both have been an asset to the Commission and have had very active first few months of service. Warm welcome to both!
